

Paths to Adoption in Alaska

KNOWING YOUR OPTIONS
AND GETTING STARTED

Updated November 2024

This booklet was assembled and written by Brenda Ursel, M.S., Adoption Support Specialist, with the Alaska Center for Resource Families, a program of Northwest Resource Associates. It was produced through the ACRF Post Adoption and Guardianship Support Services Project funded by the State of Alaska Office of Children's Services.

Table of Contents

Introduction and Welcome	3
Step 1: Exploring Adoption	4
Step 2: Learning the Language of Adoption	5
Step 3: Paths to Adoption in Alaska	6
Path 1: Adopting Through the State of Alaska	7
Option 1: Adopting a Child in State’s Custody	8
Option 2: Alaska Center for Resource Families Adoption Learning Path+.....	9
Option 3: Beacon Hill Permanency Department: Heart Gallery of AK.....	10
Option 4: Alaska Adoption Services/Wendy’s Wonderful Kids Program.....	11
Moving Forward with Adopting Through the State of Alaska.....	12
Path 2: Private Agency Adoption	13
Alaska Adoption Services.....	14
Path 3: Private Adoption Through an Attorney	15
Path 4: Adopting from Out of State	16
Option 1: International Adoption.....	16
Option 2: Adoption Exchanges	17
Step 4: Adoption Education	18
Alaska Center for Resource Families Contacts	20

Introduction and Welcome

You live in Alaska, and you are interested in adopting. Congratulations! There are many different paths to adoption. Sometimes it is confusing to determine which one will work for you. We want to help you choose carefully, prepare thoroughly, and be successful in building your family through adoption. We have found that families who go through the following steps make better decisions and are better prepared for the challenges that come with the adoption journey. Think of this publication as a road map. The goal of this guide is to provide you with the information you need to make the best choice for you and your family and to help you get started on your adoption journey.

In this guide, you will learn about four main steps of adoption and about options available on your chosen path.

Step 1: Exploring Adoption Before you start on any journey, you need to know which path to take. The same is true for adoption. Every family brings to this process their hopes, dreams and ideas of what their journey will be like. To help determine the best path for you, think about why you want to adopt and about what you hope to gain from it. The questions on the next page will help guide you in this step.

Step 2: Learning the Language of Adoption Adoption may be a whole new world to you. Just as with any new experience, you need to master some of the basics terms of adoption to survive and thrive throughout your journey.

Step 3: Paths to Adoption in Alaska Once you have mastered the “talk of the trail,” you are ready to decide which path will best meet your expectations, resources and desires. In this step, you will learn the benefits and considerations of the four adoption paths: adopting through the State of Alaska, adopting through a private agency, private adoption through an attorney, and adopting from out of state.

Step 4: Adoption Education This section will give you the resources needed to prepare yourself and your family for adoptive parenting and to support you after the adoption becomes official. Where one journey ends, another begins. Don’t do it alone!

By working through these steps, you will be on your way to building your family through adoption. Ready to get started? Let’s go!

Step 1: Exploring Adoption

Are We Ready for This?

Before starting on your journey, ask yourself, is this really what you want to do? Many families start on an adoption path before they are adequately prepared. These families are at risk for quitting at some point because they are surprised by the challenges that happen along the way. To prepare your family, discuss and answer the questions below. They will help you answer the question, “Are we ready for this?” Answer honestly, as that will help you choose the path that is best suited to your needs, expectations, and resources. It also helps to write your answers out. This list comes from the book The Whole Life Adoption Book by adoption expert Jayne Schooler.

1. Why do you want to adopt a child?
2. How do your extended family and friends feel about adoption? If they are unsupportive, how will you protect your adopted child from their negative attitudes?
3. How financially secure is your family? Do you have lots of debt? How will you pay for the adoption?
4. How do you feel about birth parents? What role, if any, do you believe a birth parent should have in your family?
5. How do you feel about a social worker prying into your life? How comfortable will you feel talking about finances and the state of your marriage with a social worker?
6. Do you have a history, such as a criminal record, that might raise a red flag in approving you to adopt a child? If so, how will you convince a social worker that your past history will not affect your ability to parent an adopted child?
7. How important is it that your child looks like you?
8. How do you feel about your lineage being continued by a person who is not blood related to you?
9. If you have biological children how will an adopted child fit into your family? Do you believe you can love your adopted child as deeply as you love your biological children?
10. How long are you willing to wait?
11. How would you handle a situation in which a planned adoption falls through?
12. When will you tell your child that you adopted him? If your answer is “never” or at a particular age, what steps will you be taking to ensure someone else in your life does not let this information slip before you have an opportunity to tell him?
13. For married couples: How secure is your marriage? Are you in agreement about adopting? If one of you is reluctant, are you confident that both of you will embrace the adopted child as “your child” when the child joins your home?

Step 2: Learning the Language of Adoption

Adoption may be a whole new world to you and just as with any new experience, adoption has a language all its own. Below you will find some of the common terms in adoption. Take a few minutes to familiarize yourself with the terms below.

Adoption	The legal process in which a child becomes a member of an adoptive family as though he/she was born into that family. Adoption is a means of providing caring and responsible parents for a child or children who need them.
Adoptive Parent	A parent who legally and emotionally assumes all rights and responsibilities for a child through adoption, as though that child was born to him/her.
Birth Parent	The biological parent of a child. (Note: "Birth Parent" not "Real Parent")
Triad (Adoption)	Refers to the unique adoption relationship and connection between the adoptee, birth parent(s), and the adoptive parent(s).
Home Study	A written family assessment provided by a qualified worker and submitted to court with the petition for adoption or guardianship. A home study includes the background, motivation, and stability of the prospective adoptive parents. Additionally, it assesses the strengths of a family and their readiness for adoption.
Finalization	The term used to denote the completion of the legal adoption process as marked by a court hearing and signed decree of adoption.
International Adoption	The adoption of a child who was born in another country.
Open Adoption	A form of adoption in which biological and adoptive families have some form of in person or electronic contact and have basic information about one another. Open adoption is a broad term that can refer to anything from maintaining a PO box to exchange letters to in home visits between the two families.
Relinquishment	A legal procedure whereby a birth parent surrenders legal custody, rights, and responsibilities for a child.
Termination of Parental Rights	A legal process in which a birth parent's rights and responsibilities are severed, either voluntarily or involuntarily.
Legally Free	This refers to a child whose birth parents' rights have been voluntarily surrendered and/or legally terminated. There is no risk of the child returning to his birth home.
Legal Risk	A child in a legal risk placement is moving toward a plan for adoption but the parents' rights have not yet been terminated. Because parental rights have not yet been terminated, there is a "legal risk" that the child may be re-unified with the parent, or another placement may be found with a relative.
Adopting a Child in State's Custody	When a licensed foster parent is seeking potential permanency of the child in their home whose current permanency situation is either legal risk or legally free.
Guardian ad Litem	The Guardian ad Litem (GAL) is a person the court appoints to investigate what solutions would be in the "best interest of a child."
ICWA	Indian Child Welfare Act: The Indian Child Welfare Act of 1978, is a Federal law that governs jurisdiction over the removal of Native American (Indian) children from their families in custody, foster care and adoption cases.
RPS	Regional Permanency Specialist. This is the OCS Specialist in each of the five OCS regions in Alaska who focuses on Permanency Planning, including adoption.

Step 3: Paths to Adoption in Alaska

You have asked yourself a few tough questions and learned the language of adoption. You are now ready to begin your journey, but where do you start? What path do you take? There are many paths to adoption. Each has benefits and each has challenges. The goal is the same: adding a child to your family. The journey, however, will be different depending on the path you take. To make the best decision, look at what fits with your family's expectations and circumstances.

In this section, you will find information on four different paths to adoption with the benefits and challenges of each one. For each path, "next steps" are identified to help keep you moving forward.

Path 1

Adopting Through the State of Alaska

- OCS: Adopting a Child in State's Custody
- ACRF Adoption Learning Path+
- Beacon Hill Permanency Department: Heart Gallery of Alaska
- Alaska Adoption Services/Wendy's Wonderful Kids Program

Path 2

Private Agency Adoption

- Alaska Adoption Services

Path 3

Private Adoption through an Attorney

Path 4

Adopting from Out of State

- International Adoption
- National Adoption Exchanges (For Example: NWAE, AdoptUSKids)

Path 1:

Adopting through the State of Alaska

ADOPTING THROUGH THE STATE OF ALASKA IS FOR FAMILIES WHO:

- Want to adopt children from the foster care system.
- Are interested in older children or sibling groups.
- Are open to legal risk placements or adopting legally free youth.
- Have limited financial resources for adoption.
- Want infants and younger children and are willing to support a dual track of potential reunification or placement with relatives.

The State of Alaska Office of Children Services (OCS) is not an adoption agency. It is primarily a child protection agency that investigates child maltreatment reports and works with parents and children to provide safety and permanency. When children are placed in out-of-home care (such as a foster home), OCS works towards returning that child safely to his family. When a child is unable to return to birth parents or relatives despite these efforts, then an adoptive family is sought to provide a permanent home for a child.

Within the larger path of adopting through the State of Alaska foster care system, there are actually four different options. The option you choose will depend on your needs, time frames and the type of child you feel you can parent. These options include:

Option 1: OCS: Adopting a Child in State's Custody

Option 2: Alaska Center for Resource Families Adoption Learning Path

Option 3: Beacon Hill Permanency Department: Heart Gallery of Alaska

Option 4: Wendy's Wonderful Kids Program (Alaska Adoption Services)

Note: The expectation for any family desiring to adopt through the State of Alaska foster care system is that they have completed the OCS licensing process and the ACRF Adoption Learning Path+. This basic Adoption Path consists of completing orientation and three courses: Core Training for Resource Families, Adopting through OCS, and Building Families through Adoption. The Plus (+) and strongly recommended is Trust Based Relational Intervention (TBRI).

Option 1: Adopting a Child in State's Custody

Most children who are adopted from the foster care system are adopted by their foster parents or their relatives. These are children in the custody of the State of Alaska through the Office of Children's Services. Often, teens, children and infants who have been in the same foster family for a long time have established a strong bond with that family. If efforts towards reunification with the birth parents are unsuccessful and there are no relatives able to care for the child, the current foster parents may be considered to adopt a child. This prevents another disruption for the child, who can stay with the family they know.

Benefits:

- All ages of children come into care, including infants and young children.
- The family has the opportunity to build a relationship with the birth parents.
- The family can develop a thorough understanding of the child's needs.
- A foster care stipend helps support the child prior to adoption.
- The State of Alaska pays the costs related to the adoption--there is no cost to the family.
- The child does not have to change homes or experience another loss or transition.
- An adoption subsidy may be available to the adopting family.

Considerations:

- Reunification with birth family or with relatives is first priority. If the plan is for reunification, foster parents are expected to help support the transition.
- There is no guarantee that you will be able to adopt the child.
- OCS must follow all state and federal requirements to seek relative placements as a priority and to work with Alaska Native tribes when a Native child is involved to follow all the placement requirements of the Indian Child Welfare Act.
- The family must qualify and become licensed as a foster family and must follow all foster parent regulations.
- Children in the custody of the State of Alaska may have experienced complex developmental trauma including abuse and/or neglect.

Option 2: Alaska Center for Resource Families Adoption Learning Path+

The Adoption Learning Path+ is designed for families wanting to adopt a child in State's custody and who are willing to consider both a legally free child and a legal risk placement. Legal risk children are children who have a permanency plan for adoption but parental rights have not been terminated. The Adoption Learning Path+ consists of orientation and four courses:

1. Core Training for Resource Families
2. Adopting through the OCS
3. Building Families through Adoption
4. (the plus+) Trust Based Relational Intervention (TBRI)

Families are also expected to complete the licensing process. These adoption courses are available statewide in either zoom or distance learning options. Please see our website for dates and registration information. Once the coursework is complete, ACRF staff can help you create a family profile. This profile is placed on a secure site where state placement workers can identify you as a trained, potential adoptive family. This will assist in the process of matching you with a child or children in care.

Benefits:

- No cost to families to participate in this program.
- Families are identified as Adoption Learning Path+ graduates.
- Families will receive guidance as to disclosure information for potential children.
- The family's profile will be available to placement and adoption workers statewide.
- Infants and younger children may be available through this option.
- An adoption subsidy may be available to the adopting family.
- Online and other distant learning options available.

Considerations:

- Foster parent licensure required.
- The child may be reunified with relatives or birth parents.
- Families with a barrier crime are not eligible.
- Child must be physically in your home six months before an adoption can be finalized.
- Indian Child Welfare Act placement preferences apply for Alaska Native or American Indian children.

Option 3: Beacon Hill Permanency Department: Heart Gallery of Alaska

Within the Alaska foster care system, there are “legally free” children whose birth parents’ rights have been terminated and are legally free to be adopted by another family. Some of these children are featured on the Heart Gallery of Alaska. Information and pictures of waiting children can be found at <http://www.heartgalleryak.com/children>.

Families interested in a youth featured on the Heart Gallery Alaska are asked to complete a Heart Gallery Orientation, in addition to licensing for foster care and the ACRF Adoption Learning Path. Families who are inquiring from outside of Alaska are expected to have the same or comparable Adoption Learning Path training. Contact the Heart Gallery Administrator to find out what you need to do to be considered for a child or youth in the Heart Gallery of Alaska.

Benefits:

- There are many sibling groups in need of a forever family.
- You can define the level of special needs you feel capable of managing.
- There are no costs associated with adopting through the Heart Gallery because these children are in the custody of the State of Alaska.
- An adoption subsidy may be available to the adopting family.
- A Heart Gallery associate will assist you in navigating the process.

Considerations:

- You will be working with the State of Alaska through the Office of Children’s Services.
- Disclosure may be incomplete.
- Children are usually older and may have more significant needs
- The child must physically be in your home six months prior to finalization.
- Indian Child Welfare Act placement preferences apply for Alaska Native and American Indian children.

Option 4: Alaska Adoption Services/Wendy's Wonderful Kids Program

The Dave Thomas Foundation for Adoption funds a statewide position in Alaska to recruit adoptive families for specific children. This position is through Alaska Adoption Services in Anchorage.

Benefits:

- The children are legally free for adoption; there is no plan for reunification.
- OCS can pay for the home study.
- An adoption subsidy may be available to the adopting family.
- Youth are prepared and supported throughout the process.
- The recruiter is available to help make the process successful.
- The recruiter knows the children well.
- The State pays the costs related to the adoption--there is no cost to the family.
- The recruiter can provide personal support and guidance.

Considerations:

- The children may have more extensive needs, both physically and behaviorally.
- The children may have experienced multiple traumas and/or foster care placements.
- There is a larger treatment team working with the children so more people may be involved with the process.
- It can be a long, emotional process.
- The child must be physically in your home at least six months before the adoption is finalized.
- Indian Child Welfare Act placement preferences apply for Alaska Native and American Indian children.

Moving Forward with Adopting Through the State of Alaska

Whether you choose Wendy's Wonderful Kids, foster care placement, or Heart Gallery of Alaska, your first steps of Adopting through the State of Alaska are the same. Based on best practices it is expected that all families will complete licensing and the ACRF Adoption Learning Path+.

- Attend a resource family orientation which are accessible by Zoom or telephone or in person. Go to www.acrf.org or call 1-800-478-7307 for a schedule of orientation classes.
- Fill out the OCS foster parent application. Indicate on the application that you are interested in adopting and the age range of the child you are willing to parent.
- Complete Core Training for Resource Families. This is the initial training for all resource families in Alaska. Contact ACRF for class dates and times. Check online at www.acrf.org for an online calendar or contact 1-800-478-7307 for information. This course is available via zoom, online or in workbook format.
- Complete Adopting through OCS. Contact ACRF or visit our website at www.acrf.org, for an online calendar or contact 1-800-478-7307 for information. This course is available via Zoom and an online format.
- Complete Building Families through Adoption. Contact ACRF or visit our website at www.acrf.org, for an online calendar or contact 1-800-478-7307 for information. This course is available via zoom, online or in workbook format.
- Families are strongly encouraged to complete the plus (+) of the learning path which is Trust Based Relational Intervention (TBRI). Contact ACRF or visit our website at www.acrf.org, for an online calendar or contact 1-800-478-7307 for information. This course is available via zoom.

For more information about specific adoption paths or programs, contact:

- Alaska Center for Resource Families for Adoption Learning Path+. Contact ACRF at (907) 279-1799 or 1-866-478-7307.
- Beacon Hill Permanency Department: Heart Gallery of Alaska Contact the Heart Gallery Administrator at <http://www.heartgalleryak.com/contact>
- If you want to get a private home study to facilitate this process, please contact your regional ACRF office for a list of writers in your area. You can find contact information for ACRF offices on the back of this pamphlet. Remember private home studies are paid for by the potential adoptive family.
- Wendy's Wonderful Kids Adoption Recruiter, Alaska Adoption Services. Call (907) 302-6332.

Path 2:

Private Agency Adoption

ADOPTING THROUGH A PRIVATE AGENCY IS FOR FAMILIES WHO:

- Have some financial resources for adoption.
- Want to adopt an infant or young child.
- Want personalized training, support, and attention.
- Want to know the birth family.
- Do not want OCS involvement.
- A more limited risk of abuse or neglect.

In Alaska, Alaska Adoption Services is the only private agency located in the state that helps families through the adoption process. There are also national adoption agencies that work with families such as Holt International. If you choose to work with an outside agency, check their business rating with the Better Business Bureau and ask for references from people who have adopted successfully through their agency. Find out if they have representatives in Alaska or if they can work with a family in Alaska. Again, there are benefits and considerations for using an agency.

Benefits:

- Personalized support and advocacy.
- Home study provided by the agency.
- Assistance with transition and disclosure issues.
- A liaison is provided to help you navigate through the bureaucracy.
- For domestic US adoptions, some states require that families work with an agency.
- For infant adoption, agencies will support the birth parent through the process.
- Post placement support and follow up.
- Provide service referrals.
- Agencies can assist with ICPC (Interstate Compact for the Placement of Children) for interstate adoptions.

Considerations:

- Program fees apply and vary by program.
- The wait can vary from months to years.
- Families need to research and choose agencies carefully.
- In Alaska, the birth parents have 10 days to change their mind after signing the relinquishment papers. This legality may vary from state to state.

1. Alaska Adoption Services

<https://www.alaskaadoptionservices.org/about-aas> <https://www.alaskaadoptionservices.org/about-aas>

Alaska Adoption Services matches prospective adoptive families with expectant mothers and fathers to safely place infants in their forever families. AAS works to ensure birth parents are provided with education, support, compassion and empathy as they choose whether to parent or make an adoption plan. They help adoptive families navigate through the steps of adoption including the emotions, education, and legalities of the process.

Services provided by AAS:

Pregnancy Support: They provide birth parents with pregnancy support, education, and counseling on the adoption process.

Infant Adoption Program: They operate a full service domestic infant adoption program for families in the state of Alaska.

Al a Carte Services: AAS can provide a home study, post placement assessments, case management, resources and referrals as needed for your adoption journey.

Moving Forward with Private Agency Adoption

Contact the agency directly for program information, fees, and enrollment.

Path 3:

Private Adoption Through An Attorney

ADOPTING THROUGH AN ATTORNEY IS FOR FAMILIES WHO:

- Have financial resources.
- Want to limit involvement in bureaucracies.
- Prefer a faster path to adoption.
- Know of a birth mom making an adoption plan.
- Want a baby or young child.
- Want a child who has not been involved with OCS.

Sometimes a family may know a woman or couple who is seeking adoption for her/their child. A family might also want to find a birth family wanting to make an adoption plan for their child and may seek the assistance of the attorney to accomplish this. The process of private adoption described here applies only if there is no State of Alaska legal involvement with a family.

Benefits:

- Collaborate with birth parents to obtain accurate information.
- Birth parents are actively involved in the adoption process.
- No six months waiting period prior to finalization. Once a child is identified, the process can be faster than other options.
- You may pick up the child directly from the hospital or be present at the child's birth.
- There is less risk that the child has been abused or neglected.
- Minimal bureaucracy.

Considerations:

- The adoptive parent pays all legal and adoption agency fees and potentially some costs associated with the pre-natal care of the child.
- Birth parents have 10 days to change their mind after signing the relinquishment papers. There may be other legal requirements/steps on a case-by-case basis.
- Must ensure birth father's rights have been recognized, relinquished, or terminated.
- Typically, there is no birth family counseling provided.
- No follow-up or post-placement support or preparation required or provided.
- Families need to research and choose attorneys carefully.

Moving Forward with a Private Attorney:

- Contact your regional ACRF for a list of private adoption attorneys.
- Go to the Yellow Pages or internet to find an attorney who does private adoptions.
- Ask friends or other parents who have adopted privately and find out how they proceeded.

Path 4:

Adopting From Out Of State

ADOPTING OUT OF STATE IS FOR FAMILIES WHO:

- Want to pursue children in foster care in other states.
- Are interested in children on Adoption Exchanges or National Heart Galleries.
- Are pursuing international adoption.
- Are interested in sibling groups or younger children in foster care.
- Want legally free children.

This guide focuses on helping families adopt waiting children in Alaska. However, some families choose to adopt children outside of Alaska. Adoption exchanges and International Adoption are two of the most common paths families pursue when considering children outside of Alaska.

Option 1: International Adoption

There are many reputable International Adoption Agencies such as HOLT International that have programs in a variety of countries. Currently there are no programs in Alaska to serve families wanting to adopt internationally.

Benefits:

- The adoption agency provides assistance with all bureaucratic requirements and helps families assemble a dossier according to the stipulations of the specific country.
- There may be more opportunities to adopt infants and toddlers.
- There is no trial time. When the child arrives, they are part of your family.

Considerations:

- International adoption can be expensive and have long waiting periods.
- Travel time to the country may be involved; some countries require multiple trips.
- There may be missing or limited information about the child's health and trauma history.
- There may be a language barrier.
- Other countries may not acknowledge the effects of prenatal drinking and stress on babies and children may have undiagnosed health issues.
- In most countries, a child is chosen for you. You do not choose the child.
- There is usually little to no information about the birth family. The opportunity to have an open adoption is rare.
- Adoption is subject to the laws and trends in that country. Countries may close all adoptions while a family is in process or add additional requirements.
- International adoption home studies and adoption preparation classes must be consistent with Hague Convention on Intercountry Adoption requirements

Option 2: Adoption Exchanges

Across the United States alone, there are over 100,000 children waiting for their permanent families. Many of these children can be found on Adoption Exchanges or what may be referred to as photo listings. Adoption Exchanges are websites devoted to helping states find families for their waiting children. Some familiar Adoption Exchanges are Northwest Adoption Exchange, AdoptUSKids, and Adopt America. Individual states usually have a website dedicated to their waiting children. These can be accessed through an internet search, by googling the state. For example, try “California and adoption” or “children waiting for adoption in Idaho.”

Benefits:

- You have access to children of all ages, ethnic backgrounds, and level of need.
- There are many sibling groups in need of a forever family.
- You can define the level of special needs you feel capable of managing.
- There are limited financial costs.
- An adoption subsidy may be available to the adopting family.

Considerations:

- You will be required to work with two state bureaucracies, Alaska’s and the child’s resident state.
- Some states will work directly with parents. Others require the family to work with a representing agency, such as Alaska Adoption Services.
- Disclosure may be incomplete.
- If you are chosen for a child, the Interstate Compact on the Placement of Children (ICPC) is engaged. ICPC guides the process of adoption between the states and requirements will vary from state to state.
- If a family is chosen for a child/children in another state, travel costs are usually paid by the family.
- Moving to another state is a hard transition for most children.
- Each state has different levels of financial assistance.
- Each state’s selection process is different.
- You may need to have a positive home study before inquiring about a child.
- The Alaska Center for Resource Families is not a licensed adoption agency and cannot be listed as the representing agency when making an inquiry on a child.

Step 4: Adoption Education

Now that you've chosen your path of how you are going to adopt, it is time to move to the final step—learning everything you can!

This section will give you the resources and tools you need to prepare yourself and your family for adoptive parenting and provide resources to support you after your adoption is complete. Remember, where one journey ends (finalization of adoption), another journey begins (learning to live together as a family.) Don't do it alone!

Alaska Center for Resource Families

Website: www.acrf.org

ACRF is a statewide, adoption and foster care, training, and support center. ACRF provides zoom, online, and multimedia training resources to help families navigate the state foster/adoption system. ACRF can also help families in crisis with limited case management, support, guidance, and referrals to services available in your area. ACRF offers many courses free of charge specifically designed for pre- and post-adoptive families. For the schedule and more information, please visit www.acrf.org or call 1-800-478-7307 or call your local regional office listed on the back page.

ACRF has a wide range of courses as well as an extensive library of resources which include adoption preparation and trauma informed care. To learn more about these resources please visit <https://www.librarycat.org/lib/acrf>

Adoption Learning Partners

Website: <http://www.adoptionlearningpartners.org>

ALP offers a variety of interactive, e-learning courses that are designed to increase each person's understanding of the joys and challenges of adoption. The site offers downloads of articles and papers you may find interesting. There are nominal fees for ALP online courses with most courses being $10 to $15 each.

IOWA Foster/Adoptive Parents Association

Website: <http://www.ifapa.org>

This state website has invaluable articles and downloads available free of charge. This treasure trove of information has color, personalizable life book pages to help children understand and process their foster/adoption journey in addition to many articles on how to help families parent traumatized children.

Recommended Adoption Titles:

There are many wonderful books containing the wisdom of some of the best adoption and attachment experts in the nation. Below are some of the most widely recognized books on adoption. These resources can be found at Amazon.com or Tapestrybooks.com, which is a great site for adoption and trauma related resources. Some of these titles are also available through the Alaska Center for Resource Families lending library.

1. The Science of Parenting Adopted Children Arleta James, LPCC
2. Parenting the Hurt Child: Helping Adoptive Families Heal and Grow Gregory C. Keck and Regina Kupecky
3. Adopting the Hurt Child Gregory C. Keck and Regina M. Kupecky
4. Parenting Adopted Adolescents: Understanding and Appreciating Their Journeys Gregory C. Keck and L. G. Mansfield
5. Love and Logic Magic: When Kids Leave you Speechless Jim Faye and Charles Fay
6. Love and Logic Magic Early Childhood: Practical Parenting from Birth to Six Years Jim Faye and Charles Faye
7. Nurturing Adoptions Deborah Gray
8. 20 Things Adoptees Wish Their Adoptive Parents Knew Sherrie Eldridge
9. The Connected Child Karyn Purvis, David Cross
10. Telling the Truth to Your Foster and Adopted Child Betsy Keefer and Jayne Schooler
11. Welcoming a New Brother or Sister Through Adoption Arleta M. James
12. From Fear to Love B. Brian Post
13. Toddler Adoption: The Weaver's Craft Mary Hopkins -Best
14. The Connected Parent Karyn Purvis

Adoption Sites on the Web

Alaska Center for Resource Families	www.acrf.org
Adoption Learning Partners	http://www.adoptionlearningpartners.org
Association for Training on Trauma and Attachment in Children	https://attach.org/
Child Trauma Academy	https://www.childtrauma.org/
Adoption and Attachment Therapy Partners	http://www.adoptattachtherapy.com/
Families Rising	https://wearefamiliesrising.org/
Adoptive Families Website	http://www.adoptivefamilies.com/
Tapestry Books	https://tapestrybooks.com/
Iowa Foster & Adoptive Parents Association	http://www.ifapa.org/
My Awesome Life Lifebooks	https://www.lssi.org/life-books/
Heart Gallery of Alaska	https://www.heartgalleryak.com/
Northwest Adoption Exchange	https://www.nwae.org/

Alaska Center for Resource Families

A Project of Northwest Resource Associates

For more information about adoption support and information, please contact your local office or contact adoptionervices@nwresource.org

Anchorage Office

840 K Street, Suite 101
Anchorage, Alaska 99501

1-907-279-1799 or

1-866-478-7307

FAX: 1-907-279-1520

acrfsc@nwresource.org

Fairbanks Office

815 Second Avenue, Suite 202

Fairbanks, Alaska 99701

1-907-479-7307 or

1-800-478-7307

FAX: 1-907-479-9666

acrf@nwresource.org

Mat-Su Office

Physical: 5050 Dunbar Street, Suite A2

Mailing: PO Box 876844, Wasilla, Alaska 99687

1-907-376-4678

FAX: 1-907-376-4638

acrfsc@nwresource.org